Symphony to begin

On Sunday, September 29, the South Dakota Symphony will inaugurate "A Year to Remember," the 1979-80 musical season. This is Emanuel Vardi's second year as conductor. Guest soloist for the evening will be violinist Erick Friedman. The evening's program will include music by Tchaikovsky, Sibelius and Berlioz.

The best way to insure a seat at the Coliseum (downtown at 501 N. Main St.) is to purchase a season ticket. They are available at the Student Activity Office in the Commons. The pass will admit you to seven concerts from Sept. 29 until April 19. The deadline for buying student passes is Sept. 21. All concerts are at 8 p.m.

Indian art displayed

The beautiful and striking paintings and prints presently on display in the Commons lounge are a selection of North American Indian art from all over the United States. The show will be on display through the month of September. This is actually a survey exhibition from the Red Cloud Indian School at Pine Ridge, South Dakota. Each summer since 1968 the school has sponsored a juried exhibition open to any North American Indian tribal member eighteen years or older.

It is expected that this year's exhibition will be purchased by and housed in the South Dakota Memorial Art Center in Brookings, South Dakota.
